W. C. T. U. Column.

W C T U—Watchwords: Organize, Educate, Agitate. W. C. T. U. principles: Total abstinence, Prohibition of the liquor traffic; One standard of morals for men and women; Home protection; Equal suffrage, and the teaching of scientific temperance in the public schools.

How to Turn Nickies Into Dollars.

The following words, uttered by the President of the Ohio Liquor League before the annual meeting of that organization, are brutally clear in their intention: "The success of our business is dependent largely upon the creation of appetite for drink. Men who drink liquor, like others, will die, and if there is no new appetite created, our coffers will be empty. The open field for the creation of this appetite is among the boys. After men have grown and their habits are formed in this regard, they rarely ever change. It will be needful, therefore, that missionary work be done among the boys, and I make the suggestion, gentlemen, that nickies spent in treats to the boys now will return in dollars to your tills after the appetite has formed. Above all things, create appetite."

Out of one hundred and nineteen counties composing the state of Kentucky, eighty-seven are, to use the significant term of the hour, "dry." Governor Beckham's recent victory swung on the liquor issue. The governor's record gave him the votes of the temperance element. He had secured the passage of the "country unit" local option bill, as well as other temperance legislation.

He enforced the Sunday closing law in Louisville and generally incurred the enmity of the friends of the saloon. To have Prohibition sentiment eat its way so far into the region of the bluegrass, is one of the most cheering signs of the times.—Union Signal.

"No Money In It."

"My mother gets me up, builds the fires and gets my breakfast and sends me off," said a bright youth.

"Then, she gets my father up, gets his breakfast and sends him off. Then she gives the other children their breakfast and sends them to school; then she and the baby have their breakfast."

"How old is the baby?" asked the reporter. "Oh, she is most two, but she can talk and walk as well as any of us."

"I get $2 a week and father gets $5 a day."

"How much does your mother get?" With a bewildered look the boy said:

"Mother! Why she don't work for anybody."

"I thought you said she worked for all of you."

"Oh, yes for us she does; but there is no money in it."—Watch Word.

Evanston, City of Homes, Schools and Churches—No Saloons.

A recent issue of the Evanston, Ill., Press contained a unique full-page drawing in the form of a beautiful archway, representing "The Stones that have built up Evanston of Today, and Will Sustain it in the Future" each of which bear the names of the special institutions of which Chicago's famous suburb is particularly proud.

Evanston's thirty prosperous churches compose the stately sides of the arch, while her schools and university are, of course, conspicuous. The Y. M. C. A. and the W. C. T. U. are represented as capstones of these church pillars upon which rest "Evanston's Homes."

But beneath all as the broad foundation-stone of her prosperity, the Press gives prominence to "the special act of the legislature prohibiting the sale of liquors within four miles of the university, passed in 1885." Such is the disinterested tribute of the leading secular paper of this Prohibition city of 25,000 to the value and beneficent effect of this half-century bulwark against licensed saloonism.

How Did She Know?

The local woman's club had offered a prize for the best essay, by any member on "How to Make a Husband Happy." It was a cash prize, and summer expenses were in the near distance and the competition was large and warm.

The winning paper was just three words long, and stranger even than that, it was submitted by a spinster of 57. Her dictum was merely this:

"Feed the brute."—Lippincott's.
